DRUG DEALERS TO BE EQUAL TO TERRORISTS IN KAZAKHSTAN

ASTANA, December 20 - Sputnik.

The chairman of the Senate of Kazakhstan, Kasym-Zhomart Tokayev, stated the need to toughen prison sentences for drug dealers in Kazakhstan. Drug dealers, according to Tokayev, pose great danger to the whole nation.

"We, senators, need to seek tougher prosecution of drug dealers. Up to maybe life imprisonment. Or even more severe punishment, since it is already in contact with national interests of the state and can be equated to terrorist activities," said speaker of the Senate at a plenary session of the House.

The prevalence of drug abuse among children in the country, according to senator Saule Aitpayeva, requires decisive action.

The world drug income, according to the senator, exceeds from 320 billion to 600 billion dollars a year, which exceeds the GDP of 90 countries of the world. At the same time, no one in Kazakhstan can provide accurate data on human and economic losses.

Earlier, a member of the Committee on constitutional legislation, judicial system and law enforcement agencies of the Senate, Mr. Vladimir Volkov, said that this year alone, law enforcement and special agencies revealed more than 6.5 thousand criminal drug offenses.

In total, about 19 tons of drugs, including 55 kilograms of heroin, 740 kilograms of hashish, seven kilograms of opium, 16 tons of marijuana were seized from illicit trafficking. Ninety-five percent of criminal cases on such facts were terminated due to the absence of legal mechanisms in the lists of narcotic substances under control.

At the chamber's meeting, senators adopted a law allowing for the prompt introduction of new types of synthetic drugs into the banned list in two readings.
