FOOD DELIVERY COURIERS USE DRUGS TO KEEP THEM FROM GETTING TIRED

Food delivery couriers in the pursuit of increasing orders often resort to drug use, which allows them not to feel tired at all. News.ru reported this with reference to a source close to one of Moscow's courier services.

The problem is evidenced by reports of the Ministry of Internal Affairs available to the portal, as well as the words of chief freelance narcologist of the Ministry of Health, Evgeny Brun.
The most popular stimulants are amphetamines. They quickly cause addiction, severe withdrawal, insomnia and apathy. According to the data of the Zonal Information Center of the Ministry of Internal Affairs of the Russian Federation for Moscow, 1110 violations have been recorded this year under the article on drug use of the Code of Administrative Infringements of the Russian Federation.

Criminal liability in the Russian Federation is incurred in case of purchase, storage, transportation and sale of drugs.

Couriers choose stimulants because of their low wages and the form of payment they make. Amphetamine allows to work longer, feeling the burst of energy. Yevgeny Brun, chief freelance drug abuse psychiatrist at the Ministry of Health, said he has no doubts about the popularity of stimulants among couriers. According to him, Russia has regulations to control the overwork of certain groups of workers.

REASON FOR CLOSURE OF RUSSIA'S LARGEST DRUG MARKET “RAMP” REVEALED

Russia's largest drug sales platform in the Darknet Russian Anonymous Marketplace (RAMP) was destroyed by its main competitor Hydra, found out "Lenta.ru" in the framework of a special research project "Russia under drugs".

At the end of 2016, RAMP tried to lure suppliers of precursors from the Far East away from the founding platforms of Hydra - Legal RC and WayAway. As a result of this, Hydra organized large-scale DDoS attacks on RAMP, which paralyzed its main sources of income, i.e., instant stores with ready-made caches with drugs.

At the same time, Hydra began to lure illegal wholesalers and retailers from RAMP, promising them better terms of trade. Hydra hackers also found a vulnerability in the vBulletin engine that hosted the RAMP forum and identified one of the site's developers, a 20-year-old Chelyabinsk resident. As a result, several major suppliers and drug manufacturers, as well as a team of moderators led by a man named Lizard, departed from RAMP for Hydra.

The final blow to RAMP was the collapse of the BTC crypto-exchange, where about $60 million of RAMP dealer deposits and the emergency budget of the site administration were stored.

As a result, RAMP stopped working, and Hydra became a monopolist on the drug market on the Russian Darknet.
